

TITLE	Urban Resilience in the wake of the refugee crisis. Is Trondheim accommodative for refugees' employment?
AUTHOR	Paandee, Preetam, et al.
PUBLISHER	Research Gate
LANGUAGE	English
COUNTRY	Norway	YEAR	2016

LINK	https://www.researchgate.net/profile/Preetam_Pandey/publication/312897138_Urban_Resilience_in_the_wake_of_refugee_crisis_Is_Trondheim_accommodative_for_refugees%27_employment/links/58890c3e92851c06a133e85a/Urban-Resilience-in-the-wake-of-refugee-crisis-Is-Trondheim-accommodative-for-refugees-employment.pdf?origin=publication_detail
-------------	---

DOCUMENT TYPE	<input type="checkbox"/> - BOOK/PUBLICATION <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> - SCIENTIFIC ARTICLE	<input type="checkbox"/> - TEXTBOOK <input type="checkbox"/> - OTHER
----------------------	---	---

KEY WORDS	- disasters prevention - preparedness - response to disasters - civil protection - integration - migrants/migrations - multicultural societies	<input type="checkbox"/> <input type="checkbox"/> <input type="checkbox"/> <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> <input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	OTHER (free) KEY WORDS	- Employment and Resilience
------------------	--	---	-------------------------------	-----------------------------

ABSTRACT	Using the test case of the Norwegian city of Trondheim, authors link the question of the possibility to integrate migrant communities into the labour market with the question of urban resilience. They support the thesis that the labour market must be opened in a better way for non-native communities in order to strengthen the resilience of cities.
-----------------	---

EDITED BY	PPI	YEAR	2018
------------------	-----	-------------	------

