ABSTRACT	In 2014 Lai-momo projected and coordinated the publication of the research published in this book, picturing the management of the first intervention right after the earthquake which took place in Emilia-Romagna in 2012. This research provides an example of the methodological and operative framework developed to respond to the needs of a multicultural society such as the one of the communities hit by the earthquake. Through the presentation of the practices that were implemented, and the feedbacks collected through focus group discussions, questionnaires and interviews run after the project, this book consists in an analysis of the efficiency of the emergency response. Through a multicultural approach and the coordination of different actors and stakeholders, this response included non-native communities both in the process of risk management preparedness, guaranteeing that all their needs were taken into consideration and satisfied.
